

Use of public conservation land, concessions, 2012–17

Title	Use of public conservation land, concessions, 2012–17
Publisher	New Zealand's Environment Reporting Series: The Ministry for the Environment and Stats NZ
Description	One third of our land area is held as public conservation land and managed by the Department of Conservation (DOC) to protect natural and cultural heritage, retain areas of wilderness and enable recreation opportunities. Although the use of public conservation land makes an important socio-economic contribution at the local, regional and national level, increasing human activities on our protected areas can put pressure on these environments and degrade their cultural and aesthetic value. This measure reports on the number of active recreation and non-recreation concessions by activity in each financial year, and the number of active concession operators (concessionaires) by activity in each financial year.
Source	Department of Conservation
Rights	Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 New Zealand
Rights	Attribution 4.0 International
Rights	https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/
Coverage	2012-2017; public conservation land, national
Identifier	L18/011
Type	Dataset
Language	eng-nz
Subject	conservation, biodiversity, land use, Environmental reporting series: Our land 2018